SECOND ANNUAL REPORT

January, 1922

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY

PURPOSES OF THE SOCIETY

The economic breakdown in both Germany and Austria has deprived intellectual workers of the opportunity to continue their labors. Institutions and private individuals are no longer in possession of funds for carrying on their work. Hospitals cannot care for the sick. Scientific investigation necessary for the recovery of industrial productivity is becoming impossible on account of the lack of materials and scientific instruments. Results of investigations cannot be published. Books can no longer be imported and the German and Austrian worker is cut off from the advance of knowledge in other parts of the world. Thus a gradual paralysis of intellectual life has set in which, if not relieved, threatens to destroy the basis of German life. Only through the maintenance of the intellectual life and of scientific research and investigation can the economic and social recovery of Germany and Austria be accomplished. Charitable relief alone, although necessary, cannot overcome these difficulties.

The Emergency Society was founded June 22, 1920, for the sole purpose of giving support to intellectual work in Central Europe and has been carrying on this work since that time.

WORK DONE IN 1921

The Emergency Society for German and Austrian Science and Art cooperates with central organizations in Germany and Austria. These are the Notgemeinschaft Deutscher Wissenschaft and the Notgemeinschaft Oesterreichischer Wissenschaft. In German Bohemia, the society cooperates with the University of Prague. The German and Austrian organizations are controlled by elected representatives of all the universities and scientific institutions of importance. Their work is maintained by public and private funds, but their resources are utterly inadequate for the needs, and additional help is indispensable. Requests for assistance reach the Emergency Society partly through the Notgemeinschaften, and appropriations are made in most cases in accordance with their advice. They oversee the proper expenditure of appropriations. The Emergency Society is also in communication with scientific circles abroad and receives reports and requests directly.

In accordance with the advice of the Notgemeinschaften, the needs of pure science are considered in the first place, because German and Austrian industry and commerce are interested in the maintenance of the more practical branches of research and, therefore, funds for these are made available more easily, although their support is not by any means adequate.

The appended statistics (pp. 9-12) show the distribution of funds of the Emergency Society.

COOPERATION WITH OTHER SOCIETIES AND COMMITTEES

1) The Emergency Society cooperates with the Germanistic Society of America which is purchasing books and journals for German and Austrian libraries. All requests for the purchase of American books are turned over to the Germanistic Society, while all requests for direct financial support which reach the Germanistic Society are taken care of by the Emergency Society.

2) In cooperation with the Emergency Society a committee of American Germanists was formed consisting of Professors Fife (chairman), Cutting, Hohlfeld, Howard, Priest and Shumway to assist the Jahresberichte für Neuere Deutsche Literaturgeschichte. The committee raised the sum of $700.00 for this purpose.

3) At the request of the Emergency Society, the Germanistic section of the Modern Language Association of America has appointed a similar committee to raise $200.00 toward the completion of the monumental Grimm Wörterbuch.

4) The Emergency Society wishes to express its thanks to other societies which have contributed to its work, particularly to the Deutsche Medizinische Gesellschaft von New York which by a contribution of $2000.00 has become a patron of the society; to the Boston Relief Committee, the Central Relief Committee of the District of Columbia, to the Deutsche Literarische Gesellschaft von Milwaukee, to the Relief Committee of Lincoln Nebraska, the Syracuse Relief Committee, the Technischer Verein of Newark, the Technischer Verein von New York, and the Technischer Verein of Pittsburgh.

Considerable sums are contributed by individuals to the support of intellectual work abroad. The attention of members is called to the necessity of centralizing these efforts, because only by the fullest cooperation can the funds made available for these purposes be used judiciously and economically.

MEMBERSHIP

From January 5, 1921 to January 9, 1922, the date of the second annual meeting, the membership has increased from 14 to 19 fellows, from 120 to 280 sustaining members and from 300 to 535 regular members. The distribution has grown from 19 states to 34.

BRANCH SOCIETIES

Up to the present time the only branch of the Emergency Society which has been formally established is the Chicago branch, of which Professor Ferdinand Schevill is president.

NEEDS OF THE FUTURE

1) Hospitals, laboratories and research institutions of highly specialized character must be supplied with material equipment and funds for scientific and mechanical assistance.

2) A large number of scientific journals need financial help, in order to enable investigators to communicate the results of their studies to those who must use them for their daily work. The maintenance of journals is necessary if Germany and Austria are to continue to hold their important place in the domain of research.

3) Young men of promise must be granted stipends to help them continue their studies. Without such help there will be no new generation of investigators to carry on the work of the passing generation, that has contributed so much to our knowledge. At the present rate of exchange such stipends need not exceed $100 to $120 per year.

To accomplish these ends, the Society requires an income of $500,000 a year. This means a very large membership and liberal donations. Accordingly, each member is requested to make the aims of the society known to his friends and acquaintances and to urge them to become members.

F. W. J. HEUSER,
Corresponding Secretary.
